Psychiatry Research Institute at Montefiore/Einstein (PRIME)

The Albert Einstein College of Medicine and Montefiore Medical Center have launched an ambitious Brain Sciences Initiative. As part of this large-scale expansion of basic and clinical neurosciences, the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences and the Dominick P. Purpura Department of Neuroscience have established the Psychiatry Research Institute at Montefiore/Einstein (PRIME) for Clinical and Translational Studies. PRIME draws upon the exceptional basic science and clinical resources at Einstein and Montefiore. It includes collaborations across campuses as well as the participation of the diverse communities in the Bronx, Westchester and Manhattan served by the medical school and the Montefiore Health System. Faculty affiliated with PRIME will have a unique opportunity to shape the future of clinical and translational research in Psychiatry at Einstein and Montefiore.

The joint mission of Einstein and Montefiore is rooted in their historic and enduring commitment to diversity and the enhancement of human health through science in the spirit of social justice.

Basic science, translational and clinical researchers with a track record of excellence in the areas of mood and anxiety disorders, substance use disorders, psychotic disorders, autism and obsessive compulsive spectrum disorders, neuromodulation, psychiatric genetics, bioinformatics, health disparities, multicultural mental health, or related areas will be considered. Candidates with an MD, PhD, or MD/PhD are welcome to apply for positions at academic ranks from Assistant to Full Professor. Highly competitive start-up packages are available.

Qualified applicants should submit a cover letter with a summary of research accomplishments and goals (maximum 3 pages) and a curriculum vitae to NeuroSearch@einstein.yu.edu, and have three references sent to the same address. Please include “PRIME Search” in the email subject. Review of applications will begin on September 17, 2018 and continue until positions are filled.

Albert Einstein College of Medicine and Montefiore Medical Center are equal opportunity employers committed to hiring minorities, women, individuals with disabilities and protected veterans.
